From Edm: Randolph.

To prevent the extremity of crimes is wife and humanc, and fleps of precaution have therefore been found in the laws of most focieties.

Nor is this offence of foreigners, expiated or iellened by an appeal to a prefumed right of the citizens of fentucky, to enlift under fich banners without the approbation of their country. In a government in littude for the happiness of the whole with a clear delineation of the channels, in which the authority, derived from them must flow, can a partonly of the citizens, wrelt the word from the hands of those magnificates whom the whole have invested with the country; they may take arms and provisions with them; leave thier country; they may take arms and provisions with them; but, if these acts be done, not on the ground of mere personal liberty, but of being retained in a foreign fervice for purposes of easily against another people; satisfaction will be demanded, and the state to which they belong cannot comive at their conducty, without hazarding a rupture. with be demanded, and the faste to which they belong cannot connive at their conduct, without hazarding a rupture. The evidence of a culpable intention is perhaps not foldificult as your excellency immagines; it is at least a familiar enquiry in penal profecutions, and once in not to be an objection to your interference on this occasion. But here fuffer me to repeat, that the President withes you to do nothing more than the laws themselves permit. Let them have their free course by face instructions as you may think adequate and advisable; and Firralt that they will prove competent to refere the United States from a painful altercation with a foreign sovereign.

As these unlawful assembly against a state of military force may assume values of military force may assume values of military force may assume values of singuiary force in the second of the state of singuiary sould be succeeded in the sum of the sum of any combination against the laws which may be too powerful for ordinary judicial proceedings.

Thus far have I addressed your excellency upon the constitutional and legal right of the government, which per haps are in streemes the only topics, belonging to the present occasion. But as it may not be known that the navigation of the Missishippi has occupied the earliest labors of the Executive, and has been pursued with an intensitied sincerity. I will lay before you a sketch of the pending negociation, as may be communicated, considerity, and the respective to the nation in treaty with us, and the rules observed in such cases.

The primary subject in the instructions to Mr. Carmichael, who has resided for a considerable time at Madrid as Charge des Affairs of the United States, has been to throw open to your commerce that river to its very mouth. In December 1971, it was verbally communicated to the fecretary of spain here, that his Catholic majely, apprifed of our folicitude to have some arms of the commission of the Missishippi, and the late of a port thereon, was ready to enterint a treaty at Madrid. And great indeed was that solicitude. For although this overture was not as to the peace, what might have been defired, yet was it attended without delay and accepted.

"As a proof of the interest taken by the government on this subtended without delay and accepted.

As-a proof of the interests taken by the government on this subject, I might mention, that not only was Mr. Carmichael, who had acquired an acquaintance, with perfons and circumstances in Spain, but Mr. Short was added, as being more particularly informed of the navigation to be treated of.

Instructions, comprehensive, accurate and forcible, were prepared by my predecessor; and if at this stage of the business it were proper to develope them to public view; I should expect, with certainty, that those who are the most ardent for the main object would promance that the executive has been described in the subject with the continuous continuous.

For many months have our commissioners been employed in this.

deficient neither in vigilence nor centrions.

For many months have our commissioners been employed in this important affair at Madrid. At this moment they are probably for employed. The delays which forms may have created; the events of Europe and other confiderations which at this feafon cannot, with propriety, be detailed, dictate a peaceable expectation of the refult.

Let this communication, then, be received, fir, as a warning against the dangers to which their broadth in the dangers to which their broadth in the dangers of war may expose the United States, and particularly the fiate of Kentucky, Let not unfounded fulficious of a tardines in government prompt individuals to rath efforts, in which tardiness in government prompt individuals to rath efforts, in which they cannot be constenanced;

which may thwart any favorable advances of their cause: and which, by seizing the direction of the military force must be repressed by law; or they will terminate in anarchy. Under whatsoever auspices of a foreign agent, commotions were at sirst raised, the prefent miniter plenipotentiary of the French Republic has publicly disavowed, and recalled the commissions which have been granted.

I cannot, therefore, doubt, that when your excellency shall revise

I cannot, therefore, doubt, that when your excellency shall revise this subject, you will come to this conclusion, that the refentments you profess as private man, a friend to liberty, an American citizen, and an inhabitant of the Weltern waters, ought not to interfere with your duty as Governor of Kentucky; and that on the other hand, the contemplation of those several characters under which you have considered yourfelf, ought to produce a compliance with these measures which he irresident of the United States has consigned to your difference when you have considered your the irresident of the United States has consigned to your difference when you will be upon the product of the United States has consigned to your difference & execution.
